Mr. Joseph Benjamin Oakleaf:

An Appreciation

FOR many years it has been the intention of the compiler of the present bibliography that when a fitting opportunity presented itself, a public tribute of personal respect and esteem should be paid to Mr. Joseph Benjamin Oakleaf, of Moline, Illinois, the owner of the largest private collection of Lincolniana in existence and compiler of the recent bibliography of Lincolniana bearing his name.

I first became acquainted with Mr. Oakleaf shortly after the period of the Lincoln Centenary, about the time I attained my majority. I had applied to him for a copy of his "Analysis of the Gettysburg Address" and told him something of my past limited accomplishments in the collecting line and my aspirations for the future. This seemed to kindle his interest at once. Perhaps it was my age, but at any rate he immediately concerned himself in my ambitions. "As soon as I get around to it I will send you a list of people to whom you can write for Lincoln pamphlets" he wrote in one of his first communications.

About that time I had printed my "Lincoln as President" and if I remember rightly, immediately disposed of about fifty copies to friends and acquaintances. But I distinctly remember that of the responses elicited the one received from my "Lincolnian God-father", if I may so term him, pleased me more than any other. My callow youth did not then make the necessary allowances for an older and kindly disposed collector who wanted to say something encouraging to a beginner. "I can assure you that I appreciate your kindness very much," he wrote in acknowledgement of the copy received, "and also add that the matter was worth printing. You covered the subject in a very excellent manner and I am glad that you concluded to print it." Furthermore, he interested himself in the disposal of certain copies of the remainder of the edition to book dealers and his wise counsel proved most valuable.

"Come to me at any time you like for advice or anything else," he wrote; "I am always glad to hear from you. I have not yet had time to make up that list of which I wrote you, but when I find time to do so you will find that it will bring you in at least fifty pamphlets for the mere asking," a prophecy which was later verified. Not getting time during the week to secure the data for me, I find from one of his communications that a lengthy list of titles was made up on a Sunday afternoon.

"Do not send me any stamps for replying to your letters," was his injunction, "for I hope that you take as much pleasure in receiving letters from me as I do in writing them."

"I note that you have written to people and got no reply," he wrote upon one occasion, evidently trying to bolster up the courage of a tyro who was losing heart. "That has been my experience in a great many instances, and it is something that we cannot help. You will have to think up other ways of getting at it. Write to the mayor of the city, but don't neglect to enclose stamps. When I started in my collecting I had no one to go to for information, but if I heard that an item was printed at a certain place I wrote to the publishers for information, and if I got no reply I wrote to the postmaster of the town, and sometimes I wrote eight or ten letters for a commonplace item, but I generally got it. The pursuit of an item has been very pleasant to me."

As I cull through our correspondence of the period I find that almost all of the letters received from Mr. Oakleaf either contained mention of new items, and where they might be obtained, or similar information concerning those which I had written him about. During the formative period of our friendship my collection received its greatest impetus.

But Mr. Oakleaf's interest did not stop with our mutual hobby. It extended to various personal and business affairs of the present compiler; my initiation into and membership in a fraternity of which he was a member; his congratulations and words of advice when he welcomed me into the "ranks of the benedicts". "Now, my dear Starr," he concluded upon the latter occasion, "here is my hand with my heart in it. God bless you and may the peace which passeth all understanding be yours forever and a day."

And while with the passing of the years our correspondence has necessarily been carried on more intermittently and in a more or less desultory manner, yet I have never found reason for lowering the high regard and esteem in which I held this Prince of Collectors at the beginning of our acquaintanceship.

PREFACE

THE present compiler has had very pleasant and friendly relations with all of the "Big Five" mentioned by Mr. Oakleaf in his bibliography, and with many of the other prominent collectors. Of the latter I cannot refrain from mentioning Rev. William E. Barton, Dr. L. D. Carman, Mr. John E. Burton, Capt. O. H. Oldroyd, Mr. Charles T. White, Mr. Frederick Ray Risdon, Mr. Allen Henry Wright, Prof. Clark P. Bissett, Miss Ida M. Tarbell, Mr. George P. Hambrecht, Mr. J. Friend Lodge, Mr. Emanuel Hertz and Mr. Wm. H. Townsend.

My acquaintance with Major William H. Lambert, of Philadelphia, antedates by a year or more that with Mr. Oakleaf, and from his hand I received many of the best items of which he was author.

I was also acquainted through correspondence with Judge Daniel Fish. I well remember that when I applied to him for a copy of his 1906 bibliography, of which but forty numbered copies were supposed to be printed, I was too late to receive one of them. But the Judge did kindly send me an unnumbered set of the leaves for binding, autographed, which I had bound for myself and therefore am the fortunate possessor of a copy of the bibliography similar in all other respects to those now reposing in the libraries of my only a little more fortunate brethren.

To me there has always been a mystery connected with item No. 503 listed in Mr. Oakleaf's bibliography, which I believe should be mentioned here.

In a catalogue of Lincolniana issued by Schulte in 1914, item No. 246 of this bibliography, there is listed the following:

"Lincoln Collections and Lincoln Bibliography by Daniel Fish, printed for the Bibliographical Society of America. 8vo. Wrappers. New York, 1909."

September 3rd, 1915, in response to a query from me Judge Fish wrote: "All that I know of the 'work' you mention is that in 1908 I gave an address entitled as you indicate, before the American Bibliographical Society at Lake Minnetonka, the annual meeting being held there that year. This was published in the Proceedings of the Society. If it was ever printed separately I was not asked nor advised."

Unable to get a copy from the dealer, I tried elsewhere, and under date of October 12, 1915, Mr. Carl B. Roden of the Chicago Public Library wrote as follows: "With reference to the article on Lincoln collections by Judge Fish, published by the Bibliographical Society, there is only one explanation for its appearance separately, and that is that a few copies were issued in that form and sent to the author with the compliments of the Society. This is the usual practice, and we know of no other way in which this item could have found its way into the catalogue."

"No copies of the talk before the Bibliographical Society were sent to me," wrote Judge Fish, October 22nd; "I only heard of its publication incidentally and then had to buy a copy of the Proceedings in order to see how it looked in print. So that explanation fails. At any rate, if any such publication was made, intended for me, it never came to hand."

My relations with Mr. Judd Stewart began about the time I first corresponded with Mr. Oakleaf, and although not as intimate, yet they were most cordial. I always found him ready with suggestions or information when called upon and he presented me with many of his privately printed items.

In September 1919 while in New York City for a few days I called upon Mr. Stewart in his offices in lower Manhattan. I was accorded a cordial reception and although a very busy man, Mr. Stewart engaged for some time in conversation, showing me many of his rarest items which he kept in a safe in his private office and a collection of autograph letters of every President of the United States up to that time. He was much interested in the Barnard statue agitation then going on and had taken a leading part in it.

As Mr. Oakleaf states, Mr. Stewart passed away July 3rd, 1920. I hold a letter from him dated May 26th of that year which exemplifies his courtesy and kindness to a fellow-collector. I had written him for certain information and although bed-fast yet his unfailing uniform desire to be of assistance caused him to write from his sick bed. "Yours of 24th rec'd. Pardon my pencilled reply but I've been confined to my bed several weeks and cannot do otherwise." And a few weeks later with the return of a letter of mine dated June 12th this kindly soul had pencilled on its margin a reply to my latest query. This is my last recollection of this great-hearted man, a recollection which I shall always carry with me. Though confined to his bed with a serious illness, yet he could and did find strength enough to comply with the request of one of his correspondents who of course had no knowledge of his condition. And it was while in Washington several weeks later that I was informed by Mr. Oldroyd who maintains the house in which Lincoln died, that Mr. Stewart had recently passed away. We both deeply regretted his loss.

With Mr. Charles W. McLellan my relations were not so intimate as with the rest of the "Big Five", and yet I never wrote him for information that I did not receive the benefit of his larger experience.

FOREWORD

ALL of the items listed in the main body of the present bibliography of Lincolniana are to be found in the collection of the compiler, and it is believed that no duplication has been made of any listed by Judge Fish or Mr. Oakleaf. In several instances, however, I have included items disposed of by Judge Fish in his notes which should properly be listed separately on account of their nature and differentiation from the publications he saw fit to list, reference to which will be found in the notes following the titles. No attempt has been made to include those titles with slight variations in title page, pagination, etc., of which several have been discovered, except they bear the impress of a different edition.

Only those issues of magazines dealing with Abraham Lincoln as the principal theme or published and advertised as "Lincoln Numbers" have been included; those issues, and they are legion, whose covers alone bearing Lincoln portraits, etc., would indicate them to belong in this class, are not included if they fail to measure up to this standard. Lincoln sections of newspapers, and there were many such called forth by the Lincoln Centenary, with the exception of a few pictorial issues and a notable supplement of the New York World, have not been listed, which applies generally to ephemeral programs, menus and the like, although a few of this nature which have a more than passing interest are included. Only those prospectuses and advertisements of items, portraits, etc., are included which bear the impress of a permanent preservation, and no single sheet publications of this nature have been recorded, and of the latter there are not a few. As bibliographers seem to be allowed a certain license as to the inclusion of items not conforming to the line laid down, in the present instance a few such, possibly a half dozen, will be found herein, the reasons for which appear in the notes.

At the suggestion of several collectors I have been glad to incorporate in the Addenda such titles as they saw fit to submit, garnered from their collections and not recorded in either Fish or Oakleaf.

Items are listed under the name of the author if the latter is given either on the title page or elsewhere in the publication; anonymous productions are listed under the "first word of the title not an article"; catalogues, if no compiler's name is mentioned, under the name of the publisher.

The programs included, such as the American Missionary Association services, appear under the title of the Association, Society, etc., or place held. Library lists will be found under the name of the library; State publications, if no author given, under the name of the State; prospectuses and advertisements, if author's name appears on title page, under the name of the author. Proceedings and other publications of societies and other public bodies will be found under the name of the Society, State or place. Issues of magazines and newspaper sections appear under the name of the magazine or newspaper, while titles relating to other individuals, such as Mary Todd Lincoln, "Aunt Sally" Saunders and Boston Corbett, will be found under such individual name. Lincoln's writings are listed under the name LINCOLN. A few variations in these rules will be found the reason for which will be apparent.

Unless otherwise stated the titles as given appear on the title page, if the cover or caption title it is so stated; italicized words in brackets do not appear on the transcribed pages. In the notes will be found information concerning the imprint, place of publication and date, followed by the size, pagination and whether illustrated or not. The following abbreviations have been used: n. i., no imprint; n. p., no place; n. d., no date; pp., pages; fr., frontispiece; ills., illustrated; and adv., advertisement.

BRUMBAUGH. Board of Public Education Office of Superintendent of Schools Room 694 City Hall, Philadelphia January 20th, 1909.
 The Committee of the Board of Public Education appointed to arrange in the schools for the Celebration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Abraham Lincoln, directs that in every School under the authority of the Board, exercises commemorative of the occasion shall be held during the closing hour of Friday, February 12, 1909. It is the wish of the Committee that these exercises shall be of an especially interesting character. They may consist of songs, recitations, speeches and the reading of essays. Whenever possible special speakers may be provided. Although a suggestive program is given, yet it should be varied to suit circumstances. The general character of a school should determine the nature of the exercises.
 Primary Schools may omit from the program any of the numbers preceded by a star. Program for the Celebration of Lincoln's Birth-

GREAT. A Great Lincoln Centenary Offer Next Year, the 100th anniversary of Lincoln's birth, will create a tremendous interest in the "first really great American born and bred on our native soil." Anticipating this, it is but natural that the Lincoln History Society, whose object is to disseminate knowledge of Lincoln, should turn to the two powerful and influential periodicals who have done the most to keep Lincoln before the eyes of the American people. These two periodicals are McClure's and The American Magazine Arrangements were made, and we are now prepared to offer the greatest and most attractive bargain in the history of periodical publishing. Here is the offer, good only if you act promptly: $4.00 Worth for Only $2.00 [Cut of Lincoln and list of seven attractions with prices] All for $2.00 if you act at once [Note to subscribers] Further details are on the following pages 104

WHIPPLE. Lincoln's Hundredth Anniversary "The Story-Life of Lincoln" appears just now when the interest in him is keener than at any time since his death. Lincoln was born just 100 years ago (February 12, 1809), and this volume is the most fitting memorial of the occasion. [Cut of Lincoln between two flags] William H. Taft in a letter to Wayne Whipple says: "I am always much interested in reading of Lincoln's life." The people are always hungry for more Lincoln. The Story-Life of Lincoln By Wayne Whipple [Cut of volume] . 290

SANDBURG. Ready February 4 [Cut of Lincoln's hat and umbrella] Abraham Lincoln The Prairie Years By Carl Sandburg Author of "Smoke and Steel," "Chicago Poems," "Rootabaga Stories," etc. The very first chapter of Carl Sandburg's story will convince you that it is not "just another life of Lincoln." It is the man himself! Something of that genuinely spiritual quality which Lincoln possessed has crept into Sandburg's pages. Sandburg was born and has lived in the very same country where Lincoln was born and lived. He has spent the greater part of his working life visiting almost every spot Lincoln visited, studying documents, searching museums, and talking with those who actually knew him 357
